What is Mentoring?

The concept of mentoring is by no means a recent phenomenon. The word itself, simply defined by the Oxford American Dictionary as "a trusted adviser," finds its origins in ancient Greece. In the Odyssey, Mentor is the name of the trusted friend who in Ulysees' absence protects, nurtures, educates and guides his son Telemachus into adulthood.

The basic mentoring relationship is simply friendship with someone a little more experienced, a person who acts as a guide in regard to vocational discernment and spiritual formation; provides counsel and pastoral support in times of crisis; and most important, helps the mentee recognize the already present action of God in his/her life.

Who is the Mentee?

- One who yearns for more knowledge of their familial roots and spiritual heritage
- One who seeks guidance in developing a more meaningful and spirit-filled life
- One who acknowledges a restlessness of heart that only God can fulfill
- One who desires to explore vocation and calling
- One who seeks to be challenged and rewarded by successfully navigating the Wake Forest experience
